

Dr. Pandemonious Fish - born in error, not yet dead.

Dr. Fish (Pandy) is a self-educated (also self-examined and self-qualified) doctor of ... erm ...ahh ...ooh ... well a doctor anyway, I know because he told me.

He's frightfully clever and has been entertaining audiences across Europe for over 20 years. He does all sorts of things from daring trapeze and astounding acrobatics to jolly juggling and diabolo skull-duggery.

Archibald Beardsley - born by surprise, will probably die the same way.

After the shock of birth, Archibald (Beardsley to his friends) has occupied himself trying to make sense of the world. Nothing to report yet.

Despite everything he's spent the past 18 years performing and teaching circus skills to children and adults across the land. An ex maths teacher and also a bit of a technical geek, he particularly enjoys explosions - but don't tell the grown-ups!

Seaside frolics brought to life by two preposterous throwbacks from a bygone era. The Eccentric Gents perform devilish tricks, comic buffoonery and highly visual walkabout entertainment.

Having all the accoutrements required for luxurious travel, including a private beach for land-locked locations, these intrepid adventurers will bring the halcyon days of summers past to any event.

Fish and Beardsley summering on the Riviera

On one long-haul adventure the boys landed their cold-air balloon on a small tropical island.

Before long they found themselves explaining the basic principles of avionics to an enthralled group of locals.

The chaps enjoy the promenade at one of Wiltshire's most picturesque seaside resorts.

Dr. Fish demonstrates his revolutionary Farthing-Penny, designed for aerodynamic efficiency.
